The Grand Commandery Christmas Party

was held on December 8th at the Rainbow Girls Camp and was attended by 40 people!

BLESSINGS IN A BACKPACK

Who will feed the kids this weekend?

During the Grand Commandery Christmas Party, food donations were collected and taken to Parkview Elementary School in Bedford for their "Blessings in a Backpack" program. The donations are sent home with children that might not otherwise have food in the house. Mike and Patty Robbins want to thank everyone for their generous donations.

Grand Commandery Knights
Templar of Indiana

Thank you for your generous collection and donations that supplied many families with extras. We really appreciate you including our school!

Thank you again
and Merry Christmas!
PVI Staff

Holy God, we thank you for the generous gifts and opportunities you have given us this past year. It has been our prayer to be Your obedient children shining Your light wherever we go. Father, now as we are blessed, by Your grace, to receive another year, we ask to be Your light once again. We ask to stand firmly in Your faith once again. We ask to be able to rest peacefully in Your arms at the end of each day, knowing it is Your love and grace sustaining us and calling to others. Help us serve you well in the coming Year, this is the desire of our heart. Through Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

Years of Separation

Our Veteran's give up a lot to keep us safe. The Dubois County Herald recently wrote a story about Sir Knight Eugene Demotte and his 20 years of service in the U. S. Army. Thank you, SK Demotte!

Visiting

LaPorte York Rite

Pictured are members of the York Rite Chapter #15, LaPorte Council #32, and LaPorte Commandery #12 as James Dove, PGC, presented a significant donation to Rev. Dennis Meyer for the LaPark and SplashPad due to open in the Spring of 2020. The SplashPad and playground are designed for all children, even those with physical challenges.

York Rite Leadership Program

The General Grand Chapter, the General Grand Counsel and the Grand Encampment of Knights Templar, USA, are jointly sponsoring the York Rite Leadership Program.

This is a program open to all York Rite Masons who are now in the beginning stages of leadership or who will be soon leaders within the fraternity. This program runs over a three-year period, with one day classes offered at the Department meetings in March. There is absolutely no cost to the participants for the program or materials. The only cost is transportation, hotel room, meals and conference registration fees. I would suggest that the local York Rite bodies pay the above cost or plan to reimburse the cost upon completion of the class if they are able. This is an investment in the future of your York Rite Bodies. By encouraging participation within this program, it will only help your group grow stronger in the long run.

A brief outline of the course is as follows:

Year one is General Leadership skills

Year two builds upon year one

Year three is communications skills

These are full days with very skilled instructors who are experienced in the fields that they teach.

In the past, the participants had to be nominated for an invitation for the program. Now it is open to all who may want to improve their leadership skills. I have forms available for those who have an interest in the next class.

These classes are now also open to women. If you know of any leaders within the Amaranth, Eastern Star or Beauceant, that you feel would benefit from this program please feel free to give them my contact information and I will see that they get the necessary registration forms.

Ohio Masonic Lodge feeds first responders on Christmas

The Far Hills Masonic Lodge opened its doors Christmas Eve and on Christmas to feed area first responders.

This is the 11th year volunteers have given up all or part of their holiday to give back to first responders.

“The reason why we started out doing it was because no restaurants were open for Christmas,” James Mack, caregivers reunion co-chairman, said. “The police, fire department, emergency crews they didn’t have any place to go to have food.”

The lodge served dinner, breakfast, and lunch. Mack says on average they serve 100 people each year. However, he said it’s not uncommon for them to see some of the same people multiple times in a day.

“While they were eating, they got called out,” Mack said. “I told them leave, go get your job done, come back, we’ll give you a whole new meal.”

First responders are welcome before, during, and after their shifts as are their family members. Some are able to take advantage of this and have a brief moment or meal with their family while working the holiday.

Mack says the volunteers do it as a way to thank the first responders for everything they do throughout the year. During their visits the first responders all say how appreciative they are to have this option on Christmas Eve and Christmas Day.

“It’s very pleasant it’s very rewarding,” Mack said. “The police and fire departments, they’re great guys. Really good for our community. We really need to get out and support them and that’s why we do it.”

Any left over food is being donated to a local church to help feed the homeless.

Knights Templar Eye Foundation

Some ways your donations are being used...

Dr. Milo Smith, Ph.D., was presented a $65,000 grant to screen thousands of drugs for their ability to treat amblyopia

Dr. Milo Smith, Ph.D., from the Friedman Brain Institute, Institute for Next Generation Healthcare, Mount Sinai, New York was presented a $65,000 check for research that will identify small molecules with the ability to rescue amblyopia through cell-type specific mechanisms, as well as set the stage to scale their approach to screen thousands of drugs for their ability to treat amblyopia.

Critical periods are childhood windows of brain plasticity that respond to sensory and social experience to enable development of optimal cognition and behavior. Disruption of critical periods can lead to neurodevelopmental disorders - for example, normal visual processing in the brain can be disrupted by early eye problems such as misalignment of the eyes (“cross eyed”). If caught early, the resulting amblyopia can be corrected and good vision can be restored. However, if the eye alignment is not resolved until after the critical period has closed, the condition becomes permanent impacting 3% of adults.

Discovering drugs that can reactivate critical period plasticity after a critical period has closed would be a boon for treating plasticity-related neurodevelopmental disorders, such as amblyopia.

Among hundreds of neural subtypes, this lab has recently identified a single subtype marked by a protein called somatostatin that when transiently activated in adult mice reactivates critical period plasticity.

Inspired by this finding, they are using genetic engineering approaches to grow these somatostatin neurons in a dish with a fluorescent molecule called GCaMP6 that glows brightly green when the neuron becomes active. If successful, this study will set the stage to scale this approach to screen 1000s of drugs for their ability to activate this important neuron type. Positive hits from this screen will be candidate drugs to be tested further for their ability to reactivate plasticity in adult mice and to restore good vision, correcting amblyopia.
